At is this kind of intelligent approach which provides variety for performer and audience alike, while revealing his ability as a teacher.

He played Mozart's Concerto in D major, K. 451, with delicacy but firmness and a lyrical touch, every note carefully placed. But it didnot seem to dance as it should, perhaps, because the orchestra tended to accompany rather than take a full part as Mozart wished. LACK OF LIFT

There was some dragging of pace and a lack of the joyous lift so essential to Mozartian vitality, so that the whole effect was unexciting. But then, this is not an exciting concerto.

The excitement was re-served, properly, for the Bartok.

It has been said that only Hungarians can play Bartok? Here at any rate was one Hungarian (conducted by another) who clearly understood the work.

stood the work.

The Concerto No. 3 was Bartok's last composition; he seems to have retired from the world not with anguish, but with serenity, affection and even triumph, with hints of a return to earlier harmonic structure (easier for modern ears than his more cerebral music), and even the cerebral music), and even the odd echo of themes from the great Romantics whose music has offered solace to so many others.

It opens quietly, without complexity, as if paving the way for the central Adagio, a tranquil study of moving simplicity. Bela Siki played the concerto decisively and with Bartokian strength of purpose giving the partient.

In keeping with the Hungarian theme, yet still offering variety, the orchestra concluded with Kodaly's Peacock Variations. These were written for the Amsterdam Concertgebouw, a great virtuoso orchestra which the still fledgling Victoria Symphony can hardly hope to emulate; but their performance shows that they need not fear exposure without a soloist.

Vital Salvage Operation

Affairs Minister Sharp a few days ago when tabling in the Commons the latest report of the International Joint Commission were doubly alarming. Both his words and the reading between the lines convey a startling message of danger, and the urgent need for action, in regard to the pollution of Lake Erie, Lake Ontario and part of the St. Lawrence River.

The IJC report on these waters is the outcome of more than six years of work, following the original request in 1964 for information on the extent, causes and locations of their pollution. The main question has been answered with abrupt clarity: the pollution is lake-wide in extent on both sides of the international boundary and has reached a point where it is causing injury to health and property. The principal causes, as Mr. Sharp sums up the report, are "wastes discharged to the boundary waters and their tributaries by municipalities and industries.'

Lake Erie, the Commission found-and conditions may have worsened since the last tests-"is in an advanced state of eutrophication." and Lake Ontario is rapidly undergoing the same deterioration. Clearly the IJC report is a warning of first importance and calls for the "urgent action" that Mr. Sharp emphasizes. The report sets out the remedial measures that are required of the governments concerned at every level. There must be immediate programs to reduce the phosphorus content in detergents, equally quick. implementation of programs to

THE REMARKS OF EXTERNAL treat municipal and industrial waste and to reduce the introduction of phosphorus into the waters. The report also calls for action in regard to oil spills, mercury, radioactive substances and other hazardous

> Both the United States and Canada have taken steps, on the basis of earlier interim reports of the IJC, to start the long job of rehabilitation. But international governmental machinery is cumbersome. There have been meetings and committees of experts have been set up and further meetings are in store. There will have to be agreement on standards of water quality, and an administrative structure to enforce them. Already the task is spreading: it is now proposed that the whole Great Lakes system and its tributaries be studied for pollution.

Obviously something more than the normal pace of governmental procedure is called for. We are faced with an emergency that has been building for many years and has now reached a critical point. The Great Lakes fresh water system is a vital feature of the ecological and economic processes of a large section of the continent.

What the IJC has done there, and the measures that are taken to remedy the situation it has revealed, could become a pattern for similar restoration in other threatened waters. The Great Lakes could also be viewed as a testing groundif we fail to pass this test there is little hope that we shall master what is rapidly becoming mankind's major global problem.

THE LEGAL CONCEPT OF NEUtrality is having a difficult time surviving in a world that is becoming more closely integrated through trade, communications, aid programs, and alliances. Neutrality originally represented a strictly impartial international position in every sense. The duties, rights and liabilities attached to neutral status became contentious issues and gave rise to a vast literature in international law.

Neutrality, however, could not operate in a vacuum. International recognition of neutral rights was sponsored by the great powers as a means of reducing potential sources of friction among them: Belgian neutrality in the nineteenth century and Austrian in the twentieth are examples. Today even Sweden's and Ireland's neutrality is a policy of convenience which reflects a comsupportable and permanent position. Sweden and Ireland, in fact, are taking steps to dilute their neutrality by applying for full membership in the Common Market, presumably recognizing the Market's stated aim to move towards an "enduring and closer union between European peoples."

The only country in Europe and perhaps in the world in which neutrality is not only indigenous but viable, Switzer and, is now being advised to seek full membership in the Common Market rather than to be content with a purely economic relationship. Speaking in Geneva recently Paul Henri Spaak of Belgium urged the Swiss to take up full membership in the Market and to use their considerable acquaintance with federal forms of government to assist Europe in its political evolution. Spaak told his audience, rather gratuitously, that an atomic conflict in Europe would see the end of Swiss neutrality.

The government in Berne, though, has good reason for its policy of caution and for its desire. to limit its association with the market merely to trade. A reversal of Switzerland's traditional policy of neutrality would endange fortable inactivity rather than a able position as a respected sanctuary for the world's peaceable institutions and as an acceptable centre for international conferences. There would be more to lose than gain if Switzerland unnecessarily entered the international political arena. It can continue to render great service to the world as a useful and necessary instrument of legal neutrality.

I suspect that human ears are about as dull by comparison to porpoise ears as our sense of smell would be in comparison to that of a bloodhound.

The sound of snapping one's fingers in a room would inform a porpoise of a great deal more than it would inform us: it might give you an idea of the shape of the room and its contents, if you were a propoise.

When a bird produces a sequence of sounds and then repeats that sequence, you say the bird is singing, and for that same reason I say that whales, too, are singing.

The difference is that a whale's song does not last for seconds, it lasts for minutes. The shortest I've ever heard is about seven minutes, the longest about 30.

Another difference is that longest about 30.

Another difference is that whales run their songs together, so that there is no break between them. You've no idea what the true beginning and the true end is.

The temptation is to improve that consider the consider a male.

The temptation is to imagine that one is a male and one a female when you hear these sounds in combination. But the more probable answer is that everybody sings. I suspect that both males and females, and young as well, make some sort of sound. We can tell an individual but its coper.

I find whales very begulling creatures. They're more like cows than anything else I can think of. Their only desire is to get away, from you when you come near them in a boat. They don't start to charge or show any intent to hurt the boat.

I've had them swimming down amongst the cables of the hydrophones that we tow, being very careful not, to them-that's how much cases when we're chasing after them, they can out-manoeuvre an outboard motorboat.

They are very flexible, very agile, and the most beautiful thing I've ever seen them do is leap. When they jump out of the water—not quite completely out, the very tip of the tail remains in the water—they seem to do so with the intent of creating the most enormous splash they can possibly make.

They also lie on their sides.

They also lie on their sides by the hour, lazing their long, supple forearms—their flippers—into the air, and slamming them down onto the surface.

singing in any area is the waves in that area, and to think of a whale just beneath the surface, gently hanging like a large balloon suspended and down by these waves, and making it he se sounds, is something that appeals to me. It appeals to other people as well. Mary Hopkin remarked that these were the most beautiful sounds of the wild world she'd ever heard, and that she herself would like to sound like a whale.

I am particularly interested in another aspect of these whales, which is that the world should become interested in them before it's too late. The hump-back whale has been brought very close to extinction in the last 10 or whaling industry. In the 19th century, a three-year voyage in a whaling ship brought back the oil of .37 whales: that's about a whale a month. A comparable ship in this day and age gets one to four whales per day. This sort of multiplication means that the industry is at the absolute industry is at its absolute height right now: the greatest decade of killing that's ever occurred was between 1960

Whaling's all mechanized now. It's so efficient that the whale doesn't stand a chance, and there's no danger in it to anybody. Years ago they used a harpoon from a boat, hand-thrown. It's now fired

The harpoon weighs about 200 pounds and it hits the whale with enough force to bury it completely. It then waits about five seconds and explodes and shoots shrapnel throughout the body of the whale. This is supposed to kill it, but there is on record at least one fight which lasted nine harpoons and four hours. The whale is a very advanced animal. It's a mammal, and presumably suffers the way you and I do.

Whales provide nothing that you and I do.

Whales provide nothing that is unique, not a single substance for which we don't have far more abundant synthetic or natural alternatives. For example, they provide lipstick, shoe polish, floor wax, margarine, soap, paint-dryer, transmission oil, lubricants for atomic submarines, and pet food. The whaling industry produces less oil than any other source which the FAO bothers to list in its statistics. If you compare it with corn oil or fish oil, it's a miniscule contributon. It produces a seventh as much oil as do sunflower seeds.

In the United States we've just gotten a law passed which prohibits the importation of baleen whales and also sperm whales. I hope that other countries will follow suit because I think this sort of economic restraint on the whaling industry is something that' really has some meaning.

thing that really has some meaning.

About five years ago a law was passed to protect sperm whales in their breeding-ground. If ever there was a fundamental principle of biology, it is that if you don't want to bring an animal to its laber you don't want to bring an animal to its want to bring an animal to its knees you don't hunt it where it breeds. After the law had been passed, the Russians announced that they would not abide by this law and they were quickly followed by the Norwegians and the Japanese. As a result the law is completely meaningless becompletely meaningless be-cause it only applied to the operations of the Russians, the Norwegians and the

"A doctor can bury his mistakes, but an architect can only advise his client to plant vines." FRANK LLOYD WRIGHT

The RCMP office in Banff, Alberta, is one block from the railway station. It stands in the middle of a sea of gravel.

It is two (maybe three) storeys high and shaped like a shoe-box. It has aluminum posts and is covered with pale-blue panels. It stands near the banks of the Bow River, in the shadows of the Canadian Rockies, as a symbol, of all that is bad about the architecture of Canadian public buildings.

Some people think that the coyotes howl at the moon, but it seems more likely that they howl at the RCMP building.

* * * There are many horrible examples. Between downtown Ottawa and the airport, there is a collection of government buildings (all finished in bureaucrat beige brick). They are as drab, uninteresting, and ugly as any instant Siberian city.

Vancouver has a post office that looks like a gigantic men's washroom.

By JOHN NICHOL

Every city has its own monstrosity. Of course, there are exceptions. Now and again the system produces a building with flair and style. But the overall scene is as dull as ditch water.

There seem to be two reasons for this unrelieved mediocrity. First, there is the suspicion that despite design awards and other public relations programs, no one cares much what a building looks like as long as it is big enough and doesn't leak.

Second, and more important, architects for public buildings are rarely chosen by open competition. Instead, they are appointed by the government department concerned. When competitions are held for the selection of architects, the improvement in design-quality is startling.

The prize for the best pavilion at Expo '70 (Osaka) was won by Canada. This spectacular building was designed by Erickson-Massey of Vancouver. They obtained the design contract as a result of a nation-wide architectural competition. It is interesting to note—that Erickson-Massey have never been appointed by any government to design a major public building.

The Toronto City Hall is easily the best municipal building in the country. The design was chosen in open international competition.

Since governments are committed, in words at least, to improving the look of our cities, there is a good argument that they should begin with the buildings for which they have sole responsibility.

The constant refrain is that constitutional tangles between municipal, provincial, and federal governments hamper reform of the the ban environment—and there's a good deal of truth here. But in the field of architecture, the various governments are free of any such jurisdictional nattering. There is no excuse for public money being spent on bad buildings.

In some countries (Finland and Switzerland, for instance) all design contracts are open to competition. We should do the same. Here is a way in which our environment can be improved by a single decision. Five will get you ten it won't happen.

youngest man ever named by the group, and may be the youngest of any similar construction leaders in the country. He is the first to have had a father precede him in the same office.

He wasn't even born when Pat Paine, a dean of the Victoria association, was building houses and a reputation even before George Farmer in pre-war Victoria.

Wayne, wyo will be 30 in March, represents both the old and the new in construction. He has the backing and upbringing....of a traditional builder melded with the training of an engineer and the outlook of youth.

He says the election reflects the way things are changing. There is some significance in the fact that the rest of the board of directors are all men over the age of 40, and having all been elected at large, chose Farmer as president.

One of the biguest problems

One of the biggest problems of the construction industry has always been a breakdown between the professional people and the practical people—the designers and the builders.

"Traditionally the designer-has been the intellectual, the contractor the muscl man, and that's go o change. I is changing, and I'm an ex-ample, a sign of the times," Farmer said.

He is acutely aware of the communication block between these two vital segments of the industry, neither able to fulfil itself without the other.

His father also recognizes the failure of architect and engineer to understand the builders, and the contractors on their part to respect the professionals. But he still snorts a little skeptically when their common aims come up for discussion.

The young Farmer thinnks Victoria Construction Forum, which he helped organize for the first time in Victoria several months ago, is one way of achieving respect, understanding and co-operation, as architects, building inspectors, contractors and tradesmen gather for frank-discussion under one roof.

"It's a matter of educating people. The younger people responded very well. The older ones say it is just more of the same old thing."

bad times with labor, inflation and resultant government-inspired slowdowns.

Closer harmony with the professionals will be reflected in lower construction costs as new technologies are more easily introduced, Farmer believes.

Why doesn't the construction association include contractors who build houses? Because, said Farmer, they have little in common. Commercial and institutional construction is one field; house-building another.

Jurisdiction Dispute Flares on Oil Rights

HALIFAX (CP) — Resources Minister J. J. Greene says it would be better to settle the dispute over who owns mineral rights off the Nova Scotia coast outside the courts.

Mr. Greene and Premier Gerald Regan were scheduled to discuss the dispute during a meeting here today.

Members of the Nova Scotia Liberal Association at their annual meeting Saturday gave resounding approval to Premier Regan's stand that the province should reap the benefits if a major oil find is made off the coast.

But that's not the way Mr. Greene interpreted the situation.

He told reporters that as far as he knows, mineral resources found on the continental shelf belong to the people of Canada. He said this was proven by the Supreme Court in British Columbia.

Mr. Greene said a court battle over the jurisdiction r i g h ts would probably leave a bad taste. "It's faster to settle it out of court.

"Companies are not interested in an area where they are buying a law suit" should they be lucky enough to make a find, he said.

the Prices You, as a consumer, know that most food stores claim that they have the lowest prices in town.

The fact is that no one store can honestly claim that they have the lowest prices on every item simply because the competition could cut one or two items and make their claims inaccurate. We don't claim to have the lowest prices on all items, all the time, but we do say this: Woodward's regular shelf prices are based on being competitive with those stores who claim to be the lowest (we shop them all the time) and our specials represent good honest savings.

So when it comes to prices, don't discount Woodward's - we're there with

DATSUN Takes B.C. Rally Awards!

RICHMOND - Top rally awards went to Datsun cars

RICHMOND — Top rally awards went to Datsun cars, drivers and navigators here Saturday at the annual presentations night of the British Columbia Region Canadian Automobile Sports Clubs.

Datsun won the B.C. Region Marques Championship for Automobile Manufacturers. The award was made to Mr. William Rule, the British Columbia Regional Manager of Nissan Automobile Co. (Canada), Ltd.

Datsun led other cars by a substantial margin in a points system based on performance in all B.C. region rally events.

Following is a list of points accumulated in the Manufacturers Championship:

Datsun 505

Datsun Chrysler Porsche Volkswagen Toyota

A raily is not a speed race. It's an event that tests driver and navigator skill, and most important, over-all automobile performance and endurance. Datsun showed consistency in all categories over miles of difficult roads in a wide range of conditions.

Datsun er Toyota Plants To Come To Canada?

In response to a query by Opposition Leader Dave Barrett, Datsun and Toyota executives in Japan have indicated great interest in constructing automobile assembly plants -in Canada. Barrett pointed out in his reply to the throne speech in the Legislature that sales of Japanese imports are reaching new record levels every month. With this increase in mind he seels it would be beneficial to the economy of B.C. If such possibilities were investigated.

Barrett received an answer from Datsun indicating that they were already considering the construction of a plant in Canada. Toyota answered, saying they were also interested in the proposal.

"Harry always liked that big-bang sound in his musicals, and he claimed my voice wasn't loud enough. Except for the bar scene in Glida when I sang Put the Blame on Mame and one song in Pal Joey, he always used someone else's voice. Fine thing! I had studied singing since I was a little girl."

Long, Sad Night At the Suzie-Q

By Jack Scott_

The young lady with the best pair of legs in the office (and how she'll hate that description!) has been after me for some weeks now to write a commentary on the women's liberation movement and the other night, at the Suzie-Q Billiard Parlor, that movement in its militant aim for genuine equality, but, like most men, desperately concerned that it may produce diminishing returns through excessive togetherness.

I accept women's wish that they be something more than merely sex objects (though I wouldn't fight it, myself), but I brood a lot about its possible effect in making men less manly and women less womanly.

the younger chaps, who have never known anything else, but every man of middle age or more will have seen what has happened as the result of the female's invasion into the games fellows has happened as the result of the female's invasion into the games fellows play.

Take fishing, for openers. It's not so many years ago that fishing was for men only. You kissed your wife goodbye and you went off with Ned and Ted and Ed and for a while, though you may have been a $7-pound weaking, you were a rough, tough he-man. You spoke coarsely, acted boisterously, abused your frail body with too little sleep and too much grain spirits and just generally acted the fool. You returned to your loved ones purged, a better, finer man. Even, occasionally, with some fish.

All that has gone now. Mama goes on the fishing trip. Mama insists on going. Nine times out of 10 she doesn't much like fishing. She gets cold quickly. She gets bored quickly. She is notably short on that dumb patience that will permit a man to sit motionless, in abject physical misery, yet perfectly content, for hour upon hour.

Because she is a finer, more compassionate person she abhors the killing of fish and repeatedly makes this known. My own wife—Lord love her!—is always rooting for the fish. But she goes—and Jane and Jenny and Janet go, as well, and in the hame of women's liberation they have destroyed what was once man's most reliable safety, valve. Very often now

But she goes—and Jane and Jenny and Janet go, as well, and in the name of women's liberation they have destroyed what was once man's most reliable safety valve. Very often now the poor boob returns from what should be therapy with more anxieties and tensions than he took with him.

Golf is an even more spectacular example. For decades and decades women fought tenaciously to get a dainty foot in the door of the royal and ancient game. Their eventual victory came slowly, a stage at a time through referriess, implacable pressure. I can recall, myself, the uproar that followed the formal acceptance of Milady into the inner sanctums of clubs where no high-heels had ever trod. Ladies' Day became any old day, with a few hard-dying exceptions. What had been a man's green world was suddenly lost forever. Whether it was lost by generosity or spinelessness is immaterial. Lost it was.

Talk to any professional or serious male devotee of the

Talk to any professional or serious male devotee of the game, with your solemn promise that there'll be no affributable quotes, and you find all but unanimous agreement that the woman golfer remains an unwanted intruder.

She is unfamiliar or contemptuous of the common etiquette of the game that's evolved since the year 1457. Only last week at Uplands I was one member of a four-some slowed to a snail's pace, with four other all-inale four-somes backed up behind us, because three langorous, chatting ladies vere damned if they were going to accord us the courtesy of were dammed if they were going to accord us the courtesy of playing through.

Normally this would be only a passing irritation, totally insignificant in considering the wider question of women's lust for equality. But then came my night at the Suzie-Q.

When it was suggested by my friends Forbes and Barron that I join them for an evening of billiards I gladly accepted. It had been years since I'd played, but the memory of that ultimate betreat of masculinity was still as green as the balze on the tables. I could see again that great dark room where I misspent so much 'of my youth, only the playing surfaces lit from low-hanging, hooded lights. I could hear again the pleasant clash of ivory balls and the crisp clicking of the well-executed carom.

It was a place for men and men only. They were serious men who concentrated on a demanding and rewarding discipline, who spoke quietly and laconically lest they disturb the grave concentration of their fellows. A deep sense of tradition and of camaraderie pervaded the gloom.

Oh, I knew that some misguided, self-destructing Victoria aldermen had changed the bylaw (on March 28, 1963, a fateful day) to permit females access to such places. I might fateful day) to permit females access to such places. I might have guessed that a billiard hall called the Suzie-Q wasn't going to fit my cherished image. But nothing could have prepared me for the shock that was in store.

There it was, a long room as garishly lit as an abbator, a bedlam of rock music belohing from loudspeakers and dozens of little ladies gaily squeaking and gigzling, waving their cues about like deadly weapons, occasionally even hurling the balls upon the tables, not one of them with the slightest idea of what the splendid old game is all about.

It was a hard moment, believe me for a man who is all

It was a hard moment, believe me, for a man who is all for women and for women's rights. I frienn, if it comes down to their robbing us of our rights there may have to be a little liberation going the other way—wouldn't you say, sweetheart?

Dear Eunice Farmer,

I took your suggestion to heart and made long quilted skirts for my daughter and myself for the holidays. They were fun to wear and started us on our new way of dressing at home. I intend making several long skirts for variety—our family loves

My problem is that when I My problem is that when I gather the top of the skirt and attach the waistband, there is too much fullness for my figure. I feel like a bag tied in the middle, but if I try to use less material, the skirt is too narrow for walking. What can I do to improve the appearance and still make these skirts in a jiffy?—Mrs, M.M.

Dear Mrs. M.M.:

There are several ways of taking out some of the excess fullness at the top of your skirt. You can place an unpressed pleat at the centre front. This will be a soft fold and will not be pressed flat all the way down the front of your skirt. You could take several short darts at the waist, especially at the side areas, and these darts would not be more than three to four inches long.

Instead of gathers, you

Instead of gathers, you could make half-inch folds around the waist. Experiment by pinning the top many ways, Once you have found the most becoming, you can make all of your skirts automatically.

DEAR ABBY: Why did you tell the young mother who wanted to get rid of her 3-week-old baby girl to talk to her doctor about it? Would you go to your dentist for legal advice? Does your rabbi give you flu shots? Who cuts your hair? A garage mechanic?

Doctors, lawyers and ministers may be expert in their own line of work, but they are not social workers. Occasionally they might place an unwanted baby with the right couple, but, believe me, doctors (especially) have made some serious blunders. Their idea of a "good home" is one in which there is a lot of money. money.

WON'T ADMIT FACT

Of women lawyers in gov-ernment service, Marguerite E. Rifchie, senior advisory counsel in the federal justice department, said in a letter accompanying her question-naire that in many cases she has found that women are unwilling to admit there is discrimination.

This was either because they were trying to conceal the fact from themselves or because they "must play the role of "Uncle Tom" and that their chances of promotion depend absolutely upon their conformity to and acceptance of the existing patterns."

She also said that she has found that women who have been subject to discrimination in the government service "and who have told me of it with considerable bitterness," take an early retirement and occupy themselves in more pleasant ways than by fighting discrimination.

In Mr. Harvey's study, a few women lawyers from each opinion group said that the woman lawyer who at-

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Equal opportunity still is a hot issue in Sweden, but there appears to be strong tendencies toward less rigid views on

"Men can now say they can't go to a board meeting unless it is held in their home and they can look after the children," says Camilla Odnoff: Sweden's family minister.

"Girls are starting to choose less conventional careers, but in this respect I think men are still conservative," she adds.

The status of women in Sweden has been a controversial Issue here since long before 1921, when they were first allowed to vote.

It is perhaps significant that the terminology has changed.

What was once the "woman question" has become the "sex role question" or even the "low-income question.". DO LAWS WORK?

Mrs. Odhnoff, speaking for the Social Democratic government, does not think equality can be achieved by changing laws which are already designed to serve this very end.

Auxiliary officers for 1971 are: Mrs. Ian Douglas, presi-dent; Mrs. Thomas Atkinson, first vice-president; Mrs. Carl This is where views differ; on how to interpret the rules. In the name of children, in the name of love and in the name of that diffuse quality called "womanhood," they have been read out to mean just about anything.

Swedish Women Work Toward Equal Opportunity

By ANN WILKENS

Militant feminists in weden have already started sing such expressions "women power" and some are, at least in words, com-mitting themselves to unpar-liamentary action.

Mrs. Odhnoff does not think there would be any point in taking such action.
"It would be a great step in the wrong direction," she said.

BEGAN IN 1960 "There is a great deal of attention focused on low-income problems right how and in this context, women's problems can be solved without an excess of hostility."

The equal-pay principle in Swedish government service was established in 1947. The year before, women had become eligible to apply for certain posts in government service where before no men were allowed.

women were allowed.

Swedish women in industrial work were given their formal right in 1960, when the largest trade union, ILO, and the Swedish Employers' Confederation agreed to introduce equal pay for men and women doing the same job. During the following five years, special pay scales for women in collective wage agreements were abolished. It

ECONOMY HURT Despite the letter of the law, reality is a great deal grimmer for Swedish career women.

One recent survey disclosed that for every $20 earned by a 35-year-old male shop assistant, a 25-year-old female shop assistant earns a little less than $15 — even if they are both working at the same place and doing more or less the same job.

Judging the Needs of Plants

By HIEDA BEASTALL

There's a lot of satisfaction in trying to assess the cultural needs of a plant when you can see it but have no previous knowledge of it, not even its name.

This will happen in the lives of most gardeners sooner or later, calling for mental agility in putting together the visual evidence to come up with logical culture.

Taking some of the best known shrubs Taking some of the best known shrubs of our gardens and parks, we notice layender, rosemary and tamarix all with narrow, almost needle-like foliage. All are native to hot, sump places and poor dry soils; their leaves are narrow so that the surface exposed to the hot sun is reduced to the minimum needed to manufacture food for the plants.

The color of many shrubs which thrive in similar surroundings are noticed as being either grey or greyish green, for the same reason of reducing entrance of hot rays which damage plant tissue.

Broad leaves transpire (give off) much moisture in sun, and this would be more than could be taken in by roots from the dry soil in which they grow.

Another group of shrubs for poor, hot soils are the stuses, all with showy, short lived flowers over a period of any weeks in summer, all evergreen and all with comparatively narrow leaves which are rather sticky. This stickiness of leaves is another device plants use in hot countries to prevent excessive transpiration.

When grown in moister cooler climates these natives of sunny countries are seen to develop wider leaves, lose some of the stickiness and will often succumb to root rot from excessive moisture.

At the other extreme are shrubs with broad leaves. In a general way, we notice that the larger the leaves the more shade and moisture are natural for the plants.

shade and moisture are natural for the plants.

This is noticeable in the rhododendrons. The they leaved rhodos and azaleas (which are rhodos also) are those thriving in sunny open garden spots, while those with leaves 10 or 12 inches long must have filtered shade from sunshine. We find the same theory applying in the evergreen section of Viburnums. V. davidi and V. rhytidophylum with leaves six inches and 10 inches respectively, both do best in moist, seinishaded positions, while the smaller leaved Laurustinus, (V. times) flowers better in sun and needs less moisture.

Heathers and brooms are other familiar hot sunshine.

Heathers and brooms are other familiar hot sunshine plants with tiny narrow leaves; though most of our heathers like a soil having fine humus to act as a moisture holder from one watering to the next.

From these known plants and their preferences, it is but a few considered steps forward to being able to judge the need of a plant we may be seeing for the first time.

This is good exercise, and soon tells us whether we have been gardeners who looked without seeing, or whether we saw and observed.

The reader might raise the question: "But what if East had possessed another club. Wouldn't the defenders then have made a club trick, sending declarer down to defeat?"

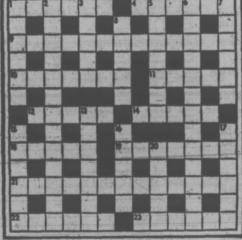

The answer 'Bs', of course, "Yes." But if East had another club, declarer could not have fulfilled his contract even if the opponents had shown him their cards before he started playing. Very simply, if East had possessed a third club, declarer could have attributed his defeat to "circumstances beyond his 'circumstances beyond his

ROWAN AND MARTIN'S LAUGH-IN. 8 p.m., Channel 5. Italina actor Marcello Mastrolanni makes his American TV debut with Dan and Dick tonight, The Laugh-In regulars take off on aviation, and the Flying Fickle Finger of Fate goes to a public official in California.

MONDAY NIGHT MOVIE. (rerun) 9 p.m., Channel 4. "Divorce American Style" (1967) with Dick Van Dyke, Debbie Reynolds, Jason Robards, Jean Simmons, Van Johnson, Shelley Berman, Martin Gabel, Lee Grant and Tom Bosley, Hollywood's answer to the modern Italian comedy classic has its moments, but, as you might expect, it's lightweight and mostly silly.

WORLD PREMIERE MOVIE. 9 p.m., Channel 5. "San Hill — Who Killed the Mysterious Mr. Foster?" Ernest Borgnine portrays a non-political man persuaded to run for sheriff against a prosperous rancher. The murder of the town minister makes this a different kind of election. The one who solves the mystery gets the job. Sam Jaffe, Bruce Dern, Will Geer, J. D. Cannon, Judy Geeson, Carmen Mathews and John McGiver stars."

REALITIES, 9 p.m., Channel 9. "In Search of Rembrandt" is a fine account of the life and work of the master, using his canvasses and scenes of Hollland today. James Mason's narration

THE CAROL BURNETT SHOW, 8:30 p.m., Channel 8; 10, Channel 7. A special treat tonight for fans of the old Hollywood or any man with a memory: Rita Hayworth makes her first performing appearance on a television show.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Petit mal, in French, means the small disease, and refers to a form of epilepsy. Grand mal is the big disease, in which the patient suddenly crashes to the floor, has a convulsion, and perhaps then is unconscious for half an hour.

In petit mal, the patient simply goes unconscious or neommunicative for 20 or 30 seconds. Perhaps for that length of me the anxious mother will keep saying to her child, as she sees his eyes turn up and glaze, and as he stops talking, "What is it, darling? What is it?" And then the child comes out of it and goes on talking.

So far as I can learn, these people rarely fall to the ground; they may quickly sit down, or they may lean up against the wall, because they had a tiny bit of warning that something was going to happen. One of my patients used to complain bitterly because when she would get a brief spell of petit mal while working in the kitchen, she would drop whatever was in her hand at the time, perhaps a plate or a potful of something. Also, on several occasions she burned her hand on the stove or under the hot water far.

Through the years, I must have made scores of diagnoses of previously unrecognized epilepsy in a minute, simply by asking the patient if he ever had little forgetful spells or spells when for a few seconds he stopped saying what he had started to say, and I got the answer, "Why, yes; I have had those spells ever since I

Many of the people who tell me of petit mal will later admit that when they were children they had a few spells of grand mal, but I have seen hundreds of people who have had only petit mal, with spells of great fear, horrible nightmares, a quick temper which wis a nuisance to them, perhaps spells of the jerks or shakes, and many other curious symptoms.

I read the biography (written by his wife) of Dostoyevsky, the great Russian author, an epileptic who much loved his wife and often would apologize to her for having gone into a violent rage over some slight annoyance. Once, when he went into a violent spell of jealousy he was so thankful afterwards that he hadn't grabbed and strangled her in his rage.

There are, of course, many people who have a violent temper who haven't epilepsy. But if I had a violent temper that I couldn't control well and that would often embarrass me, particularly after having had a few drinks of aleohol, I would gos straight to an expert who would make electroencephalograms showing my brain activity. These records of the tiny electric currents which are constantly running through the brain, commonly tell an able neurologist that he definitely is dealing with a mild form of epilepsy that has not made big falling spells.

Fortunately, there are drugs which can clear away or cut down on the frequency of the attacks of petit mal. In many cases the attacks are so mild that they do not need any treatment. Small doses of phenobarbital several times a day will often help, perhaps with the addition of one of several new brain-quieting remedies.

Representatives of fishermen's organizations in B.C. have decided to start again on the buy-back part of the commercial salmon fishing licence limitation scheme.

The licence limitation committee met at Vancouver with federal Fisheries Minister Jack Davis.

It was composed of representatives from the Native Brotherhood, United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, Pacific Trollers Association, Fishermen's Co-Op, Fisheries Association and Vessel Owners Association.

The idea of licence limitation was introduced because a large number of commercial fishermen find it difficult to earn a living. Some 25 per cent of fishermen catch 75 per cent of the pish.

It is estimated the salmon fleet needs to be reduced by about one-balf to establish equilibrium.

Several plans for a buy-back program have been proposed and abandoned.

Lawrence Jones, head of the Nanaimo local of the PTS, said there are mixed emotions among fishermen at the buy-back scheme.

He said many are also opposed to the "increased licence fees."

"You would get a majority vote, though, for high licence fees if the money was all going for salmon rehabilitation in such things as hatcheries and river improvement."

provement.

"The majority of fishermen recognize the fact that licence limitation is necessary and something has to be done. Now it is a case of working out the best solution."

Chapter One "Dining in the Grand Tradition" represents "a tradition of gracious hospitality which has been extended to distinguished visitors in the province."
It starts off with a banquet given to Sir James Douglas by the citizens of Victoria on the occasion of his retirement from the government of the colony.

Held on March 11, 1864, in the Colonial Hotel, the "bill of fare" includes soup, four main courses that offer every-kind of fish and meat you can name, a fifth course for the desserts and a hefty wine list at the end.

Dinners at Government House for Their Majesties King George VI and Queen Elizabeth in 1939, for Her Majesty the Queen and Prince Philip in 1959 and again for Prince Philip in 1959 and again for Prince Philip in 1969, are included in this chapter. Also a provincial government luncheon given for Prince Philip two years ago in the Emmess Hotel and a dinner at Government House in 1965 for Premier W. A. C. Alan Shepard, the patriarch of American spacemen, and rookies Edgar Mitchell and Stuart Roosa deliberately tried for more than an hour to make a linking mechanism fail to work—as it had when they attempted to dock their command ship with the lunar lander earlier.

"It works," Roosa said finally. "Just real fine."

The apparatus must be able to work for its next use, when Shepard and Mitchell would return from the lunar surface to link again with the command ship piloted by Roosa.

"We will have to convince ourselves . . . that the thing is indeed satisfactory for docking," said Sigurd Sjoberg, director of flight operations.

Asked whether the astronauts will go through with Friday's landing attempt on the moon's craggy highlands, Sjoberg said: "Yd like not to speculate on that right now."

Long, Sad Night At the Suzie-Q

By Jack Scott_

The young lady with the best pair of legs in the office (and how she'll hate that description!) has been after me for some weeks now to write a commentary on the women's liberation movement and the other night, at the Suzie-Q Billiard Parlor, I decided to do it.

I decided to do it.

Let it be clearly understood that I am 100 per cent behind that movement in its militant aim for genuine equality, but, like most men, desperately concerned that it may produce diminishing returns through excessive togetherness.

I accept women's wish that they be something more than merely sex objects (though I wouldn't fight it, myself), but I brood a lot about its possible effect in making men less manly and women less womanly.

It may not be readily apparent to the younger chaps, who have never known anything else, but every man of middle age or more will have seen what has happened as the result of the female's invasion into the games fellows middle age or more with have seen what has happened as the result of the female's invasion into the games fellows play.

Take fishing, for openers. It's not so many years ago that fishing was for men only. You kissed your wife goodby and you went of with Ned and Ted and Ed and for a while, though you may have been a $7-pound weaking, you were a rough, tough he-man. You spoke coarsely, acted boisterously, abused your frail body with too little sleep and too much grain spirits and just generally acted the fool. You returned to your loved ones purged, a better, finer man. Even, occasionally, with some fish.

All that has gone now. Mama goes on the fishing trip. Mama insists on going. Nine times out of 10 she doesn't much like fishing. She gets cold quickly. She gets bored quickly. She is notably short on that dumb patience that will permit a man to sit motionless, in abject physical misery, yet perfectly content, for hour upon hour.

Because she is a finer, more compassionate person she abhors the killing of fish and repeatedly makes this known. My own wife—Lord love her!—is always rooting for the fish. But she goes—and Jane and Jenny and Janet go, as well, and in the name of women's liberation they have destroyed what was once man's most reliable safety valve. Very often now the poor boob returns from what should be therepy with more anxieties and tensions than he took with him.

Golf is an even more spectacular example. For decades and decades women fought tenaciously to get a dainty foot in the door of the royal and ancient game. Their eventual victory came slowly, a stage at a time through relentless, implacable pressure. I can recall, myself, the uproar that followed the formal acceptance of Milady into the inner sanctums of clubs where no high-heels had ever trod. Ladies' Day became any old day, with a few hard-dying exceptions. What had been a man's green world was suddenly lost forever. Whether it was lost by generosity or spinelessaes is immaterial. Lost it was.

Talk to any professional or serious male devotee of the game, with your solemn promise that there'll be no attributable quotes, and you find all but unanimous agreement that the woman golfer remains an unwanted

She is notorious in her lack of good housekeeping on the s, seldom repairs a ball mark on the green or replaces a playing through.

She is unfamiliar or contemptuous of the common etiquette of the game that's evolved since the year 1457. Only last week at Uplands I was one member of a four-some slowed to a snail's pace, with four other all-male four-somes backed up behind us, because three langorous, chatting ladies ere dam'd if they were going to accord us the courtesy of laying through.

Normally this would be only a passing irritation, totally insignificant in considering the wider question of women's lust for equality. But then came my night at the Suzie-Q.

When it was suggested by my friends Forbes and Barron that I join them for an evening of billiards I gladly accepted. It had been years since I'd played, but the memory of that ultimate retreat of masculinity was still as green as the baize on the tables. I could see again that great dark room where I misspent so much of my youth, only the playing surfaces lit from low-hanging, hooded lights. I could hear again the pleasant clash of ivory balls and the crisp clicking of the well-executed carom.

It was a place for men and men only. They were serious men who concentrated on a demanding and rewarding discipline, who spoke quietly and laconically lest they disturb the grave concentration of their fellows. A deep sense of tradition and of camaraderie pervaded the gloom.

Oh, I knew that some misguided, self-destructing Victoria aldermen, had changed the bylaw (on March 28, 1963, a fateful day) to permit females access to such places. I might have guessed that a billiard hall called the Suzie-Q wasn't going to fit my cherished image. But nothing could have prepared me for the shock that was in store.

There it was, a long room as garishly lit as an abbatoir, a bedlam of rock music belching from loudspeakers and dozens of little ladies gaily squeaking and giggling, waving their cues about like deadly weapons, occasionally even hurling the balls upon the fables, not one of them with the slightest idea of what the splendid old game is all about. It was a hard moment, believe me, for a man who is all for women and for women's rights. I mean, if it comes down to their robbing us of our rights there may have to be a little-liberation going the other way—wouldn't you say, sweetheart?

In a separate vote also taken today, the United Church approved acceptance of a joint hymn book to be produced in conjunction with the Anglican Church.

The Anglican General Synod, also in session at present, voted approval for the project today as well.

The council went on record last Friday as favoring birth-control measures, including sterilization, as a means of limiting the size of families in a period when the population explosion has put mankind-into-what its resolution said is a "frightening crisis."

Today, it went even further—to declare that bringing unwanted children into the world is irresponsible, that abortion in certain circumstances is morally justifiable and that the practice of contraception "is often not only a legal right but a Christian duty."

The 25-page report of the board of evangelism and line 20-page report of the board of evangelism and social service, embracing a broad sweep of lissues including the church's policy on labor questions, has been in the hands of the 410 commissioners attending the biennial meeting for days.

WOMEN WOULD DECIDE.

The board's recommenda-tions on abortion ask the council to say officially that a woman, a fter consultation with her doctor, has the right to decide whether to have an abortion "while the foetus clearly is not viable."

The report was prepared by joint committee of the pard of evangelism and permitted to appear in front social service and the board tive study of existing abortion laws and of the theological and moral issues involved and

"Thus, we all conclude that its rights, theologically as well as in law, may reasonably be considered less than those of the actual persons involved in any conflict of interest. Abortion is always a moral issue and can therefore be justified contextually as being the lesser of two evils."

BACKS CONTRACEPTION As an alternative to abor-tion, the committee supported contraception and voluntary sterilization, saying: "Contra-ception is a couple's duty unless there is positive readi-ness to care for a new life."

The committee also questioned the right of a hospital committee to "intervene between a woman's careful Continued on Page 2
